This list of keys and references for identifying species of selected genera of plant-parasitic nematodes was compiled to assist students and professionals in the discipline of nematology. It is not comprehensive but was compiled as a current source of information and initial perspective for those interested in species identification of selected plant-parasitic nematode genera. Nomenclature and systematics follow that of Ebsary, 1991, and genera selected are primarily those in Mai, W. F., and P. G. Mullin, with H. H. Lyon and K. Loeffler. 1996. Plant-parasitic nematodes: A pictorial key to genera. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press. We added older references where most appropriate and included some references that are not keys, where keys are unavailable or if particularly useful as supplemental references. For information on older references and on genera not included herein, see E. C. Bernard and S. M. Baird. 1983. Bibliography of keys for the identification of plant-parasitic and free-living terrestrial nematodes. Nematology Newsletter 29(4):9-18. Detailed study should encompass original species descriptions. We recommend the following references for studies of the principles of taxonomy behind many
